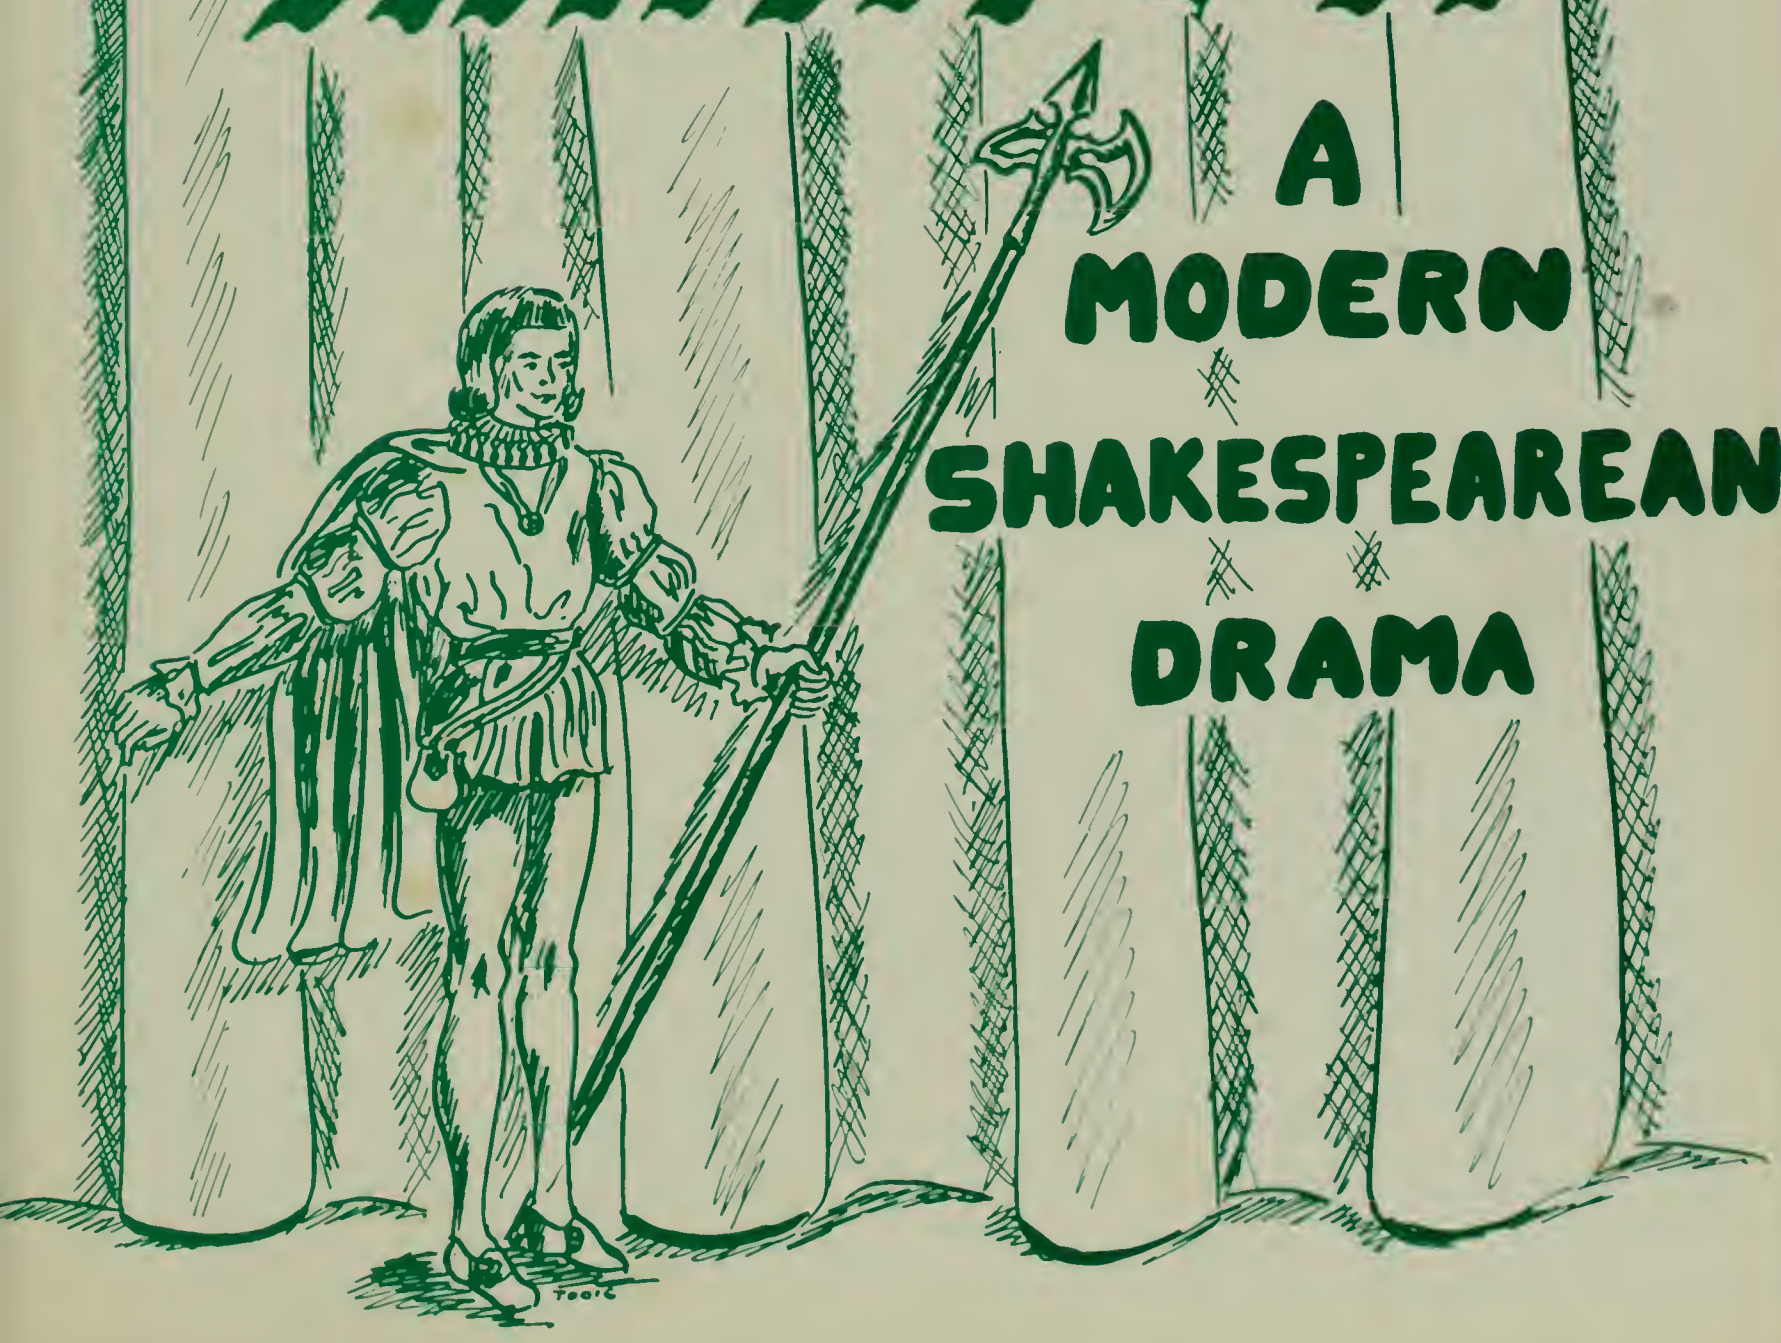
PROUDLY PRESENTS

THE

MIRROR

A MODERN SHAKESPEAREAN DRAMA



VERBUM MEMORIALE

RICHARD SHERMAN HUFF

1898 — 1953

"Your name from hence immortal life shall have."

This Shakespearean issue of the "Mirror" is dedicated to Mr. Richard S. Huff, dynamic educator, ardent sportsman, and Headmaster of Waltham High School from 1948 until his sudden death in 1953. He will ever be remembered by his students for whom he worked so diligently. It was Mr. Huff who inaugurated Student Government, modernized our Guidance Department, secured a charter in the National Honor Society, and established more than a dozen clubs. This zealous headmaster worked industriously and devotedly to procure better scholarship assistance for Waltham High students. He once said that giving to one's school is giving to one's self, and that great value is derived from the work that is done with and for others. He had an alert, quick energetic mind. Indomitable was his spirit; earnest was his fairness; vibrant was his interest in those whom he counseled. In final tribute I should like to quote a verse written by the Bard of Avon more than two centuries ago:

"His life was gentle; and the elements
So mixed in him, that nature might stand up
And say to all the world,
'This was a Man!' "

The Editor

Prologue

WITHIN WALTHAM HIGH SCHOOL, THE SCENE OF OUR DRAMA, DOTH LIE
THE SENIORS, UNDERCLASSMEN AND STUDENTS: DRAMATIS PERSONAE.
THE TIME OF THE PLAY IS THE PRESENT, THE ACTS NUMBER THREE.
THE STORY IS A TRUE ONE, WE ARE SURE YOU WILL AGREE.
THE ACADEMIC SIDE IS SHOWN, SO TOO THE SPORTS EVENTS
THE CLUBS, STAFFS, COUNCIL, COMMITTEES, AND THEIR ACCOMPLISHMENTS.
A PROMENADE, A HOCKEY GAME, A FORMER CLASSMATE'S FACE
WHICH TIME AND THE ENSUING YEARS MAY HEEDLESSLY ERASE
FROM YOUR MEMORY, WILL ONCE AGAIN BE RECALLED TO YOU
BY GLANCING THROUGH THIS "MIRROR", A PLAY THAT IS ALWAYS NEW.

To the Class of 1954 from Your Headmaster

This yearbook is a memorial to your life at Waltham High School. Through the years it will remind you of many personal things that are not written on these pages. Most important are the friendships formed by close association in classes and in school organizations. Cherish these memories and keep them alive and active in the years ahead by maintaining contacts with one another.

Twelve years of formal school education are now behind you, and you have played your part well in bringing about your development to young manhood and young womanhood. My sincere wish is that all of you will continue to seek more and more knowledge in your future years. This you will never regret.

Your teachers have made every effort to cultivate in you an appreciation of the responsibilities and benefits which will accrue to intelligent Americans. Although at times, the difficulties encountered during your school career may have seemed insurmountable you have overcome them all and now stand on the threshhold of a new and wider life experience. The greatness of America has been built upon the foundation of high school classes of young Americans like yours, each making its contribution to the noble principles of our great country. The members of the class of 1954 should go forth into their new world determined to maintain these ideals and to participate actively in the life of their community, state, and nation.

May God Bless you all!

CLASS WILL

Be it known that we, the Class of 1954 of Waltham Senior High School, being of sound mind and in full possession of our faculties (except when we occasionally forget ourselves and do too much homework), do assert and declare this document to be our last will and testament. After the full payment of our just debts and the discharge of all obligations incurred while at Waltham High School, we do hereby bequeath and distribute our possessions as follows:

To Mr. Sheehy, our genial and understanding headmaster, who has helped us with our many problems, who has saved us from countless sessions when we were underclassmen, and who has guided us through our senior year in his capacity as headmaster, we leave our sincere appreciation and heartfelt thanks.

For Mr. May, our competent master, we are installing an air-conditioning system to counteract the heat generated in Room 210, and an addition to Room 208 for bigger and better sessions.

To Miss Woodward, who for three years has been our friend and adviser, we give our utmost appreciation for all her help and guidance.

Miss McGrath, the "Miss Brooks" of Waltham High, is presented a can of ski wax to keep her skis in tip-top condition throughout the long summer months.

Mike Cataldo is bequeathed to Miss Betts to brighten up those dull moments during French class.

To Miss Sewall we will an active and successful senior girls' basketball team.

We present to Mr. Brinn an ultra-modern indoor skating rink so that those 5:00 A.M. trips to the Arena (which the hockey players so enjoy) may be avoided.

For Mrs. Sanford we have engaged a corp of assistants to round up those long overdue library books.

Mrs. Windsor receives an extra period each morning in which to complete her endless attendance duties.

For Mr. Brainerd we have ordered an electric heater to remove that early morning chill from Room 311.

A candy bar and cooky dispenser are presented to Mr. Ryan to help relieve the hunger pains that come between breakfast and lunch.

For Mr. Elliott we are building a room to call his own — one in which the Student Council may meet without interruption.

To Mr. Dwyer, the Waltham High counterpart of Cecil B. DeMille, we bequeath a group of sophomore boys to replace the fast-diminishing supply of promising actors in the Dramatics Club.

To Mr. Clark we present a book of German Christmas carols to lend variety to the Christmas program.

We bestow upon Mr. Morang a hard-working Junior Prom committee that will attend all meetings and will finish the decorations before the day of the Prom.

For Mr. Smyth we have ordered a life-time subscription to the Mirror in order that he may never forget our yearly masterpiece.

Miss Balch receives a portable television set on which she may watch "My Friend Irma" to see how a secretary puts her filing course to good use.

To Mr. Fisher we leave a football team that will show Newton that Waltham never gives up.

For Mr. Hood, one of the most loyal of Dartmouth alumni, we have purchased a can of Dartmouth-green paint with which to re-decorate Room 015 so that he may constantly be reminded of his Alma Mater.

An ample supply of needle threaders goes to Mrs. Sparks for the use of sophomore girls who can't seem to manipulate the simple tools of a homemaker.

To Miss Gearan we leave "Herman", the mechanical man, who reads every newspaper, listens to every radio broadcast, attends all civic forums, and does faithfully his Democracy homework. Having thus found the perfect citizen, she will be less likely to look for him among her apathetic seniors.

For Miss Hirst we have a supply of unbreakable test tubes for those students who become so engrossed in their experiments that they forget about the fragility of glass.

To the Junior Class we bequeath the challenge to surpass our many accomplishments.

To the sophomores we offer our congratulations for having finally found their way through the maze, otherwise known as Waltham High School.

Upon the freshmen we bestow the virtue of humility, which is so necessary in an underclassman.

As co-executors of this will and testament, we appoint Miss Chase, Miss Devane, and Mr. Roach.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hand and seal this eighth day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fifty-four.

Tomorrow

"Are we prepared to face tomorrow?"
Cry America's youth today.
"Will our training for life be complete
On our June Graduation Day?"

When we entered our sophomore year,
Korea was the name we heard.
We laughed and tried to enjoy ourselves
To forget that menacing word.

But soon the word was reality,
An era of blood and strife;
A war waged in a distant land
Was claiming American life.

In our junior year Williams returned;
Trouble flared up in Trieste.
We all were whistling "Oh Happy Day"
In a world of sober unrest.

American voters all "liked Ike";
The Braves left Boston scene.
The water rushed through Holland's dikes,
And Britain crowned Elizabeth, Queen.

While we danced to the Bunny Hop,
A Korean truce was the news;
The war that youth had fought to win
They did neither win nor lose.

The dances, parties, games, exams
In our fleeting senior year
Kept us from thinking much about
A future stern and drear.

But in the midst of our merriment
We must realize one thing;
America's future is ours to mold;
Her anthem is ours to sing.

Somewhere in a distant year
There must be a golden life,
Free from hate and free from fear
And free from war and strife.

But the road ahead is steep and rough
And very hard to climb,
Yet a distant trumpet summons us
To make this march of time.

Are we ready to march with fortitude
Into a gray tommorrow?
To accept this challenge courageously
And conquer fear and sorrow?

With Graduation fast approaching
This thought we must not bar;
America is calling forth her youth,
And America's youth we are!

"Yes, we're prepared to face tomorrow,"
Cry America's youth today.
"We'll serve and we'll fight and we'll triumph
And bring Peace to the world some day."

CLASS PROPHECY

It was a balmy, April evening in Washington, and from the terrace of my penthouse where I rested in my Bryning contour chair, I could see the cherry blossoms along the misty Potomac.

The serenity of the night was broken only by the golden voice of my next door neighbor, Miss Roberta Wise, who was rehearsing her new musical, "Sing Sing", written by that eminent composer Donald Lelievre. As I was sipping my lemonade, my maid, Justine Mahoney, approached me with a message. It read, "Your presence is requested at the office of the President of the United States of America at 10:08 A.M. Matter urgent. Be prompt."

Yours truly,

Roseanna Caissie
Assistant assistant secretary to the under-Secretary of State.

I wondered what President Franks wanted to see me for now. When I accepted the position of Special Secretary in charge of Unimportant Details, I understood my job to be simple and soft. I decided to forget my troubles and get some sleep, so I closed the book on my first day in office.

Tuesday dawned clear and bright, and I eagerly started my jaunt to the Capitol. Dick Norcross, the manager of the famous Mayflower Hotel, greeted me with a cheerful good morning as I left. The doorman called me a cab because my Bomengen Sport car was undergoing repair at Tony Mazzerini's garage after an unfortunate collision with that madcap socialite Nancy Bailey.

Rounding the corner of Massachusetts Avenue on two wheels, I leaned out the window to wave to Senator Ohnemus, who was walking her white poodle. As the cab pulled up in front of the Capitol, I gathered my courage around me and told cab driver Dave Purdy to "charge it." I could hear his humble thank you's as I made my way up the several thousand marble stairs. I hurried through echoing corridors and arrived at the President's outer office at 10:06. Receptionist Mary Lou Flynn asked if I had an appointment. I assured her that I was expected, and with a friendly smile she ushered me into the President's office. Behind an enormous desk sat President Franks, trying his best to look official. I gracefully parked my Bobby Ball Bubble Gum behind my left ear, and we settled down to business. President Franks, in a serious voice, announced that every member of the 1954 graduating class at Waltham High School owed 3 cents on his year book. The publishing company was threatening to sue. It was my job to collect! I hurried home and with the help of my secretary, Janet Mobilia, I looked through a 1954 Yearbook and the current edition of "What's What and Why" written by Dick Tibbetts.

Upon discovering that a large portion of the Senior Class was engaged in colonizing Mars, I began making preparation for a trip there.

The next day I visited Secretary of Interplanetary Relations, Lawrence Beer, to secure permission to visit the planet. When Under-Secretary-in-charge-of-the-Mars-Project, Bernie Mikula, learned of my visit he suggested an inspection tour. I hurried to New York to secure reservations on a rocket ship from the Gail Rocket Ship Lines. President Gerry Gail was very accommodating. He furnished his newest ship, designed by Jack Farrell, and one of his finest crews, captained by Jimmy Poach. Jim Poach and his crew showed us how to adjust our seat belts, and after racing our rockets for several minutes, we blasted off.

Because it was our first rocket trip, we spent the first few minutes with our noses pressed to the windows, but there was nothing to be seen but an occasional passing meteor. Surprisingly, none of us were airsick, but we discovered Captain Poach and Co-pilot Don Cook sprawled on the foam rubber chairs in the cockpit. Thanks to the competence of Stewardess Jean Peel, who had luckily brought along a box of dramamine tablets, they didn't suffer long.

After lunch, we decided to try the new lilac tile swimming pool, and there squatting on the diving board blowing up water wings was life guard Dave LeFort. We exchanged a brief hello, collected our 3 cents, and after a few free lessons on how to perform the poodle paddle, we went back to our cabins to dress for dinner.

Pheasant under glass was served on the Moonlight Lounge, and as I speared a chocolate covered oyster with my pickle fork, I glanced up to thank the waitress who was passing the hors d'oeuvres tray. Who was it but Judy Gates, so I collected my 3 cents and left to fraternize with the other guests.

There on the observation desk I found Spencer George, peering at the passing stars through his (Myrtle) Tuscher Telescope. Because he seemed so engrossed in his observations, I merely collected my 3 cents and left.

We traveled for a few days before we approached the mid-way point, Ye Old Rocketal. Eagerly we disembarked and were greeted by Patrick Murphy, owner of the rocketel and Tony Genova, famous throughout the Universe for his Italian Spaghetti Palace.

Because we had several hours before the ship was to leave, we made a brief tour of the planetoid. We visited the Rocketel Bookstore, where we met Ronnie Brinn, Mickey Spillane's successor, who was busy autographing copies of his latest book "Who Threw The Robot in Mrs. Murphy's Furnace," or "Ketchup in the Kitchen". After talking with our old classmate and collecting his 3 cents, we bought a few things to read on the remainder of the trip and returned to the space garage. Patrick informed us that the whole colony had been planned by Oberbeck, Dunklee & Company, Architects and was built by the Jim Hart and George Gould Construction Company.

After saying thank you and good-bye, we again blasted off. We were about midway between the Rocktel and Mars when our navigator informed us that the instruments were dead and that we now were flying blind. We must have wandered around for two days before a patrol ship from the Bumble Bee Squad found us. Super Pinstein, the ace lieutenant for the squad, and his crew, Bob Dearborn, Geno Tomao, and nurses, Elizabeth Frizzell, Mary McLellan, and Betty Jensen buzzed aboard. After assuring them that we were all right, we asked to be towed to Mars.

With some difficulty we managed to land on the wide expanse of the Docherty Rocketfield. With wild enthusiasm we were greeted by a crowd including Mike Cataldo with the press card stapled to the propeller on his beanie. He and his photographer, Fred Carrol, had been sent by editor Mary Mula of the Atomic Press.

Governor Bill Lavash and a special committee of Martian citizens including Shirley Monks and Diane Place waved signs saying, "Welcome to Mars." We spent the night in the out-patient department of the Mars General Hospital where we were treated by Dr. Cornwell for Heliophobia, a dangerous disease caused by prolonged subjection to the ultra violet rays of the sun. After our x-rays, taken by Nurse Michele Lally were reported negative, we were released.

Proceeding to the Haynes Bubbletel we were greeted most cordially by manager Ian Orman, who assigned us our rooms and turned over our luggage to bellhops Matilda Mogan and Sybil Powden, who pushed the bags along on their jet-propelled scooters. Just as we were about to catch up on some much needed sleep, Lorraine Kirsch, official envoy from the Mars Chamber of Interplanetary Commerce, burst in on us and invited us to tour the planet. She ushered us to her office at the Kirsch Realty Bubbles. These were the homes of the Martian inhabitants because the climate and gravity conditions didn't permit houses. There were many contestants for the honor of being chief bubble designer. but Benny Gardiner, the enterprising young business man, was in the lead with his solar heated plastibubbles.

Miss Kirsch provided space autos for us to travel in, and we left to explore Mars. As we rounded the first bend we were practically bombed by Fay Griffin, as she came in for a landing in her hot rod rocket. As we were exchanging excited welcomes, an officer of the Bumble Bee Squad, Allan McKinnon screeched up behind Fay, ceremoniously handed her a little white ticket, and asked her if she were trying to set a record.

Then we proceeded to view the colony. Coming up in the distance we saw tremendous sky bubbles which harbored the shopping center. The sight was simply fascinating. As we neared the stores we met Ralph Tomao directing traffic into his "Park It Here, And Never Fear, Lot."

As we approached the Laurie Monahan Fashion Center, the floor walker, Melvin Casey with a carnation in his button hole, ushered us to the manager. Don Cusano extended his warmest welcomes and started to explain the layout of the store. A dazzling blonde caught our eye, and we found out that she was Marion Nelson, who was demonstrating the latest products of the "Atomically Yours" Cosmetic Company.

The display windows were exquisitely decorated by that famous artist, Sandra Thomas. Then we went to the third floor to see the latest in Martian creations for women. Again we met some old school friends, Jackie Carpentino, Pat Miller, and Elaine Card, who were modeling fashions for space wear.

The next step on the agenda was the new elementary school. There we were introduced to the faculty, some of whom we knew already. There was Don Delaney, instructing the second graders how to use their space suits. Doris Polley was in the auditorium conducting her class on a tour of modern art creations.

The principal of the school, Dick Yarossi, hurried down the corridor to make sure we met our old pal, Carol Borges, who was in charge of the admission and dismissing of the pupils.

For a long time we had looked forward to visiting the famous cadet school universally recognized to be the greatest. Breathlessly, we eyed the huge building, surrounded by all kinds of ships and military facilities. With an official gesture the guard, Don Shaw, gave us the come-on, and we marched in to see the spotless classrooms of "Apex Point." Conducting a large class of young men were Bill Thiesing and Joe Salpietro neatly dressed in green uniforms. After a short wait the important and ever busy dean of the school came to meet us. It was Lennie Johnson looking very happy and handsome.

It was dinner time, and we had been promised a visit to the Martian Quarter, where we proceeded to spend an evening of relaxation and enjoyment. The first noise that greeted us as we entered this ultra modern night club was the bill-boarded musicians Dizzy Witham and his Hot Rocket Six!!! Dinner was served by Adrian Feeley and Joanne Underhill, famous culinary artists. Later three men, approached us and asked us to dance. We were so surprised to see Rene Berard, Willard Fraize, and Rusty Cusack. As we were talking we found out that Willard owned a chemical plant and was producing jet propelled sewing machines that Rusty Cusack had designed and engineered. Rene was the publicity agent and advertising manager for the entire company.

The entertainment continued, and the spotlight caught that sparkling personality, Angie Fanara, who sang a few numbers including "Just My Beady-Eyed Bill!!!" Next Joan Martorilli sprightly leaped out from back stage and graced us with a few dances and numbers on the piano.

Then we spotted Joan Erikson, now an established actress, seated at a ringside table with a handsome stranger. We went over and exchanged surprised hellos and embarrassed Joan by collecting our three cents. She introduced us to her friend, who was Dick Joyal, a famous movie producer for the Mars office of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

With a blast from Dizzy Witham's trumpet and a whisk of the curtain we beheld a chorus line like the Rockettes from good old New York City. They were billed as the Atomokettes, and once more we spotted a few old acquaintances in the line. They were Shirley Beninati, Jean Caswell and Louise Gately, with Tania Humphreys holding the bill card. The acrobat of the troupe was Sandra Smith, who did a few limb twisting stunts as she introduced the next number.

With our sacks full of pennies we left for the rocketell to get some sleep.

The next day we rose at the crack of 3:00 P.M. and hurriedly dressed for the testimonial dinner given in our honor by Mary Pendergast, chairman of the welcoming committee. We dashed over to the Richard Perry Auditorium and fought off the photographers and reporters from different papers. Among them were old school chums Ruth Wilson, Grace Collura, and Mary Barrille.

Charlotte Basle was the cordial hostess who introduced us to the socialites and dignitaries. After that we collected our three cents from old alumni that we had met so far. The society girls Lorraine Jackson and Jean Hapenny were seated near us at the head of the table discussing the latest developments of the male population growth on the planet.

The dinner was planned and carried out by the Martian League of Women Voters under the direction of Sandra Blomberg, chairman. She was ably assisted by a committee of experts on politics consisting of Lorraine Bergantino, Jean Barnes and Rose Arena.

After a delightful luncheon the guest speaker of the day, Miss Jean Colangelo, queen of the March of Quarters, a drive for the cure of the space disease heliophobia, gave a short speech. When she had finished she tossed us three pennies, and our mission was almost completed.

With tired minds and happy spirits, we relaxed in the bubblets. After the porter had carried our baggage out to the space ship, we threw our penny sacks over our shoulders and bade goodbye to all our friends on Mars. We took our seats on the rocketship, and much to our surprise the new stewardess who came to warn us to fasten our seat belts was none other than Nellie Yee. The trip back was pleasant but uneventful, and we made a hurried landing on the White House lawn. President Franks was, much to the surprise of nobody in particular, trying out his new golf clubs in his office, newly decorated with venetian blinds from the corporation of Franks, Franks, Franks, and Franks Company, a private enterprise of the chief executive. We entered his office and solemnly dumped the pennies on his desk, smiled politely, handed him our report, and beat a hasty retreat.

So then it ended. It had been fun while it lasted, but we all had other duties to return to. We parted then on the White House steps, I to go back to my governmental duties, Gennie to her paint brushes, and Jody and Peggy to their creative typewriters. At least we had seen once more the class that had been "the most to say the least."

CLASS HISTORY

There are those moments in every man's life when he becomes depressed, feeling that the world has turned against him for no apparent reason. It is usually then that he uncovers his scrapbooks and photograph albums, dusts them off, and sits back, hoping to ease his mind by recapturing the happier moments of the past.

It was on such an occasion that I decided to reminisce upon my high school days by looking through my photograph album with the pictures of all the affairs which had taken place during my three memorable years at Waltham High School. Slowly I turned back the cover of time and read the prologue, which I had written in 1951:

"The following pictured events took place during the years 1951 through 1954, and each one is, in itself, a memory to be treasured forever."

Turning to the first page, I expected to see many familiar faces, but, to my surprise, the pictures appeared as nothing but indiscernible blurs, and I had great difficulty in distinguishing the students from the faculty members. Why? Were my eyes failing me in my old age? I pondered for a moment, and then I remembered. At that time, all pictures were "3-D", and "3-D" glasses were needed to perceive these photos. So, I adorned specified spectacles and proceeded once more into the days of yesteryear.

On the opening page was a candid of the bewildered sophomores eagerly clutching their pencil cases as they entered a new phase of education in their lives — high school. Yet, their faces seemed to be more intelligent than those of previous sophomore students, and as I remember, we had tried to prove just that by not losing our way in the labyrinth of corridors, by taking the correct lunch, and by proceeding up and down the specified stairways.

After a few weeks of being alone, we were honored by the upperclassmen at the Sophomore Get-Acquainted Dance. A photo showing our gymnasium transformed into an autumn forest caught my eye, along with candids of Warren Harding, guest disc jockey for the affair.

Next, I viewed many photos of our high school eleven as we managed to shade six of our opponents in the fall of '51. In one picture were the sophomore members of the squad who strove diligently to aid Waltham High in becoming a top team.

Many snapshots of our sophomore girls, attired in fall and winter fashions which they modeled in the semi-annual Simplicity Fashion Show, appeared on the next two pages.

A lone photograph of the students whom we had chosen to guide us through our first year of high school life adorned the following insert. The officers were Ronald Brinn, president; William Lavash, vice-president; Jean Colangelo, secretary; and Ralph Tomao, treasurer.

On page eight, many of our sophomore dramatists shown with the upperclassmen in the annual presentation of the Dramatics Club entitled The Little Dog Laughed, seemed to be happy acting in their first high school play.

No sooner had fall and the football season departed than winter and the basketball and hockey season began. Thomas Girolamo was the lone sophomore on the varsity basketball team, but with him in a photo of the team were the others who had played with the junior varsity. Hockey gained added interest that year, partly because it was the first year we had hockey cheerleaders. Sophomore girls pictured on the cheerleading squad were Joan Bond, Nancy Bailey, and Virginia Campisi.

Large photos of "Alice in Wonderland" had been taken at the annual Mirror Dance in January, 1952. There, in all her splendor, was Alice, otherwise known to us as Marion Nelson, our Class Day Queen.

The snapshots which followed were outlined in silver paint, for they were memories of the most important event of the sophomore year — the Sophomore Hop. Pictured under a circus tent were Ronald Brinn, general chairman, and his hard working committee.

Completing the pages of my sophomore year were many photographs of the ambitious and interested students who had served on various committees throughout the term. Most important were the following legislators on the Student Council: Leonard Johnson, William Simmons, Jacklyn Carpentino, Frank Witham, Edward Clark, Anthony Busceme, Benjamin Gardiner, Shirley Schools, and James Mula.

The fall of 1952 brought a new feeling of contentment and joy to us, for we were no longer sophomores. Refreshed from our summer vacation, we embarked upon our junior year.

Our growth over the summer months was apparent in a photograph of our football squad whose members resembled mammoth giants, eager to crush our opponents in the 1952 campaign.

The picture of the junior class officers was, again, on a page by itself, for these scholars were chosen as our leaders; Robert Frank, president; Marjorie Walsh, vice-president; Mary Pendergast, secretary; and Frank Witham, treasurer.

Many memories of a wonderful production were brought to mind when I turned to the next page and saw pictures of the Dramatics Club play, Curtain Going Up, and of all the junior actors and actresses who participated.

Winter once again, I could guess, from the photos of the basketball and hockey squads as they prepared to launch their 1953 campaign. Numerous junior boys played on these victorious teams.

More pictures of the 1953 Mirror Dance followed, and everyone appeared to be enjoying himself.

In March, 1953, many students at Waltham High School participated in an operetta presented under the direction of Mr. Raymond Crawford. Pictured with him was Mr. Richard Dwyer, who offered able assistance in the coaching of the dramatics portions of the production.

Another memorable event in the junior year occurred on May 12, 1953, when twelve worthy students were selected as members of the National Honor Society. A photograph of these proud, beaming students highlighted the pictures on the following pages.

Many empty pages caused me to believe that I had reached the end of my pictorial journey, but, to my enjoyment, I discovered that this blankness was introducing the most joyous social occasion of the year — the Junior Promenade. Standing amid the glitter of sparkling gowns and handsome tuxedos was Mr. Morang, faculty adviser for this dance. Another photo of the grand march showed Student Chairman Donald Cusano and the other members of his committee dancing to the music of Herb Card's orchestra.

On the closing pages of our junior year were many pictures of miscellaneous origin. There was a snapshot of Willard Fraize receiving the Harvard Book Award, a presentation to the most scholarly junior boy. Also pictured were Mary Mula, elected editor of the 1953-1954 newspaper column, and Ronald Brinn, selected editor-in-chief of the 1954 yearbook.

As Graduation drew nearer, we were sorry to have our "big brothers and sisters" leave us, yet we were happy to have reached our goal — our senior year.

Elected to serve as Senior Class officers were Ralph Tomao, Joan Beaton, Janet Ohnemus, and Rene Berard as president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively. A picture of this group standing at the open doors of WHS on the first day of school opened the third and most memorable chapter of my photo-novel review.

We returned to school on September 9, 1953, with saddened hearts, for during the summer months a tragic accident had taken the lives of our headmaster and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Huff. Mr. Francis E. Sheehy, our master, assumed the duties of headmaster, and we pledged our aid in successfully establishing the new administration.

This year it was our turn to honor the sophomores as shown by the candid photos of the Sophomore-Get-Acquainted Dance, held in September, 1953. Joan Martorilli, chairman of the Dance Committee and her diligent co-workers, formed one picture, with Herbie Card and his orchestra in the background.

On September 26, 1953, we commenced our last football season as students of Waltham High School. Candids of various positions, plays, and touchdowns were among the many photos of the cheering section and our great cheerleaders. Ann Smylie was captain, with Shirley Schools, Elaine Wilson, Joan Beaton, and Shirley Natoli as senior leaders.

Early in October, Waltham High School was represented on the WHDH Record Poll. Many snapshots showing Ralph Tomao, Mary Pendergast, Ronald Brinn, and Jacklyn Carpentino busily preparing the ballots and tallying the votes were prominently displayed At that time "You, You, You" was the top tune at W.H.S.

Upon returning from our Thanksgiving holidays, we immediately began rehearsals for the Dramatic Club play, Too Young, Too Old. Pictures of William Adams as "Papa" Jordan, Frances Landry as Phyllis Jordan, and Mary Mula as "Cindy" Wright covered the following pages.

With Christmas in the air, our exuberant and striving basketball and hockey teams prepared to have a successful 1953-1954 season. Many photos of outstanding plays and excited fans were among individual pictures of some of the high scorers of both teams.

At this point, an enlarged newspaper clipping caught my eye. Nancy Bailey, one of our outstanding seniors, was pictured receiving first prize in the nationwide Royal Typewriter Company's Essay Contest the subject of which was "What I Expect My Education and School Activities to Do for Me." A gold typewriter and two hundred dollars in cash were Nancy's splendid awards.

The next portion of my photo album contained the graduation pictures of many of my friends, for about this time almost everyone had his senior photos taken for the yearbook.

In January, 1954, Waltham High School was honored to have one of its outstanding senior girls, Jean Colangelo, selected as Waltham's Miss March of Dimes. Many pictures taken at the March of Dimes Ball showed Jean being crowned by Princess Ileana of Rumania and being honored by many of her classmates.

February was a happy, eventful month. Mardi Gras brought the atmosphere of outer space into the Waltham High School gym in the form of weird decorations of the atomic age, including flying saucers and shooting stars.

As February 19 was the memorable night of my high school career, I had saved many photos of the Senior Dance. Leonard Johnson, student chairman, along with Mr. May, faculty adviser, was pictured with the hard-working committee as they transformed the gymnasium into a dreamy, moonlit scene of beauty. Other candids showed our senior girls, with stardust in their hair dancing with their handsome, well-groomed escorts to the strains of Herbie Card's music.

Concluding the month of February were pictures of Waltham High School being feted by the Mass. State Department of Education at a special assembly in Hovey Memorial. The department presented us with a coveted award for exemplifying good citizenship in establishing the Richard S. Huff Memorial Scholarship Fund. Ralph Tomao accepted the gift for the High School, and Lorraine Jackson received a citation for exceptional individual effort.

In March, worries of College Board Exams penetrated the minds of numerous college bound seniors. Various pupils shown studying feverishly in their free periods, made me chuckle a bit, reminding me of my own experiences.

April brought spring, vacation, and the Senior Play to W.H.S. Candids of the 1954 production, Jumpin Jupiter by Carl Kurtz, portrayed Francis "Rusty" Cusack as Bob Wright, Frances Landry as Abigail Baker, and Carolyn Griff as Dorothy Freston, in a rollicking comedy depicting the trials and experiences of a young theatrical group when it became involved with "big time syndicates."

Class Day, the final and most anticipated assembly of the senior year, portrayed in colorful snapshots all of the 1954 graduates marching into the Hovey Memorial auditorium. Also scattered throughout the pages were many candids of the Class Day Queen; the senior "Stardusters"; the class poet, Ronald Brinn; the class prophet, Ann Smylie with her committee members Joanne Walsh, Peggy Denk, and Virginia Campisi; and the writer of our class will, Mary Pendergast.

As I closed the cover on my book of memories and removed my "3-D" glasses, I noticed that the pictures became hazy and vague once more. I leaned back, recalling the many pleasant happenings which I had never recorded in my album. I realized that the pictures which I had saved were my most priceless possessions — remembrances of the unforgettable faculty, the social affairs, the sports, and the fellow classmates who helped me to complete successfully, three glorious years at Waltham High School.

IT'S ONLY GOOD SENSE TO BE GOOD NEIGHBORS

President Abraham Lincoln once said, "Just as I would not be a slave, so I must not be a master. This is the essence of democracy."

His immortal words simply declared his belief in the Golden Rule.

A company, in order to be successful, must live in a community of good friends and neighbors. To achieve this, the company itself must be a good friend and neighbor. This, too, is the Golden Rule in action . . . and it is the essence of democracy."
